General Grant Dead.

The long struggle has ended. General Grant is now numbered with Lincoln and Garfield and the other dead heroes of the war.

Months of painful suffering, borne with a degree of resignation and fortitude rarely equaled on the field of battle, have endeared this dying soldier to his grateful countrymen. Nothing more is needed or would add to the affectionate sympathy and enduring regard which these painful months have kindled in the hearts of the thousands who have watched him fight his last and hopeless battle with the only foe who could successfully stand before him. General Grant is at rest.

The Musical Club.

It is the proud boast of THE CITIZEN that home talent always receives recognition in these columns. Why are we the terror of evil doers, if we are not also to be the approvers of those that do well? This leads us to remark that, of all the various forms of ability manifested among us, the most worthy of note is the recent vocal culture which displays itself every night upon the Park. The grass is already short, but this helps to keep it shorter. The inhabitants of the vicinity are already terrorized, by cannon and by the profane sound of church bells, but this aids to hold them in a subservient state. It is apparent to us that this alleged singing has a profound and philosophic reason and is intended to keep the neighborhood of the Park in a condition of proper discipline.

No one, for instance, can give any other cause than this for its regularity. It has no element of grace, sweetness or pleasure in it. There are even those who deny that it is music at all. We are not of that number. Sooner would we deny the industrious Italian the opportunity to earn his peaceful livelihood with a hand-organ than to deny the appropriateness and delight of this nocturnal concert. Yes, sooner would we abolish the necessary eloquence of the steam-whistle than to prevent in any manner the continuance of these useful strains.

We have called them "strains" with due regard for truth. The principal performer is a gentleman with a High Tenor voice, which has completely overcome the peril from an invasion of worms on our elm trees. A careful examination of the ground after he goes by, invariably shows a large area of dead worms which have dropped in despair from the branches, and are raked up by the Solitary of the Park, early next morning.

Along with this High Tenor are two five-and-seven-eighths Basses, one six-by-nine sub-Tenor and one H flat Go-as-you-please, who sings every part with equal power of attack. The Club is deficient in some respects; it has no key that it can commonly use and it goes home just in time to save its night-key from any extra strain beyond what its natural brass can stand.

At about half past ten, when it has reached the noisy point somewhere down street and is invited politely but firmly into the open air, the Club commences its rambles. It begins with the Centre, takes the grand tour of the Park, and ends off in Dublin or little Germany, leaving behind it a band of envious and envious cats, each on his own fence, and all practising the last air which they have heard. It may be objected that the feline music is monotonous and unsympathetic; but then it is a good imitation, as imitations go in this unfortunate world.

Meanwhile, as these musicians pass on their singing way, the cowed and sick-hearted denizens of the Centre are said to carefully examine their American dictionaries and to read with delight and assiduity the columns of the New York Tribune, where reference is made to "Mugwumps." Language fails them; they silently endure; and again the Curse meanders by!

Editorial Correspondence.
LAKE WARAMAUG, CONN.To The Citizen:

When I asked for a vacation from the arduous labors of the editorial chair, I promised you a letter, foolish man that I was, when I knew so well that I never could write a letter that any one would read, unless it contained a check. But I promised you, and so here goes. Lake Waramaug is reached by a ninety mile ride from New York, over the combination of roads beginning with the N. Y. N. H. & H., which is without exception the driest road that ever led to such a delightful place, but you can get a guide book, that will tell you how to go and I won't waste my strength on it. When you get there, go at once to the house of Mr. Charles E. Beeman, and tell him that you don't know me and never expect to and he will take you in, and make you so comfortable, that you won't know you are away from home, except from the fact that you can get three square meals a day without swearing at the cook.

Lake Waramaug is a lake—but there! I am infringing on that guide book again; go and see for yourselves what kind of a lake it is; it is a lake where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary can be at rest if they want to be, where the sojourner hath need neither for mosquito netting nor a boiled shirt, where every prospect pleases, and even man is a pretty good sort of a fellow. The fish in Lake Waramaug are good, and we have no doubt, that if they would occasionally permit themselves to be taken, they would prove to be good out of the lake; but they have an extremely sensitive and retiring disposition that prevents them from troubling you with their presence, except upon the most urgent solicitation.

The fisherman of Lake Waramaug! Who that knoweth the Lake forgetteth "Old Harrison," as he sits in his boat with half a dozen poles protruding from different parts of his person, looking for all the world like a big spider with bamboo legs. "Old Harrison" is a standing argument against the theory that "to catch fish you must be quiet," for he talks all the time; to you if he can, not to you, to the fish; if the fish don't bite, to himself.

There is one thing about Lake Waramaug that I do not think you will find in any guide book and may interest some of you or your readers, I am told that it is an elegant place to fall in love, and that moonlight rows upon the Lake rarely fail to have that effect, if other conditions are favorable. This report I give for what it is worth and in no way vouch for its truth. Finally, if among your readers there are any who desire an answer to the question: "O where shall rest be found?" let them go to Lake Waramaug and find it and if they can ever make up their minds to leave, they will be sure to go back.

To be continued on my return if I survive the hot weather that I hear about. J. D. G.

For more than a week the thermometer has been wandering between ninety and one hundred degrees and the intense heat is a severe tax upon mind as well as body. It is very common to hear persons express the wish, that during these hot days they were at the sea-side or among the mountains, but the warm weather has penetrated even to these favored places. In days like these there is no place like home. The luxury of living where you can disrobe and take your ease without being obliged to keep up appearances, where you can regulate your food to a most exacting taste, where you can occupy any room in the house which seems the coolest, is enough to compensate for a little increased heat. It is the part of wisdom to work as little as possible, and to avoid the consideration of fretful and irritating subjects, being content to simply exist until more vigorous days shall furnish renewed strength.

A gentleman who has been absent from Bloomfield for several years, recently returned and expressed a great deal of surprise and appreciation of the changes these years have produced. The American House and the new stores of Martin Bros. will make the entrance to Broad Street attractive and indicate that the new improvements are expected to be permanent. We should be glad to see brick more frequently used in the Centre, for the risk of fire among so many frame buildings will continue to increase yearly, notwithstanding the presence of an efficient fire department.

The work of renovating the house of Mr. R. W. Gardner is rapidly approaching completion and the result is alike creditable to the skill of the architect and builder and to the taste of the owner. Occupying as it does a prominent position upon our principal street, this house will add much to the attractiveness of the lower end of the Park. It would be a great satisfaction if equally fine houses were to be erected on the two lots on Park Place.

Rev. George A. Gates, of the Congregational Church, Upper Montclair, has gone to Colorado Springs, Col., where he will preach during the months of July and August, exchanging with Rev. Mr. Gregg, of that place.

STATE NEWS.

The Adirondack Steel Works in Jersey City, in operation since 1848, and lately employing over 100 hands, have been closed permanently. It could not compete with the Pittsburgh factories, with natural gas wells, and whose fuel costs them but little more than is paid to the miners in factories outside that city.

A combination excursion of ten Grand Army Posts of New Jersey will visit Atlantic City on the 29th instant. The Department Commander and staff will accompany the excursion. Senator John A. Logan has promised to address the soldiers.

A separation has taken place between Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller, of Vineland, on account of the latter persisting in devoting all her time to the "Salvation Army," to the neglect of her home and family.

Some of the courts of this State have decided that farm boundary fences cannot be made of barbed wire without the consent of the parties owning the adjacent land; and any man who puts a barbed wire fence along the highway renders himself liable for all injuries resulting to stock passing along said highway.

Insurance Commissioner Henry C. Kelly has distributed $15,368.83 among the different fire companies of the State that are entitled to receive it under the law. This fund is devoted to relief of firemen injured while in the discharge of their duty.

The public library and art gallery for Plainfield, erected by Mr. Job Male at a cost of $25,000 has been formally presented to the city. At the opening there were paintings and other works of art on exhibition to the value of $40,000. A free circulating library of 20,000 volumes will be placed in the building by December next. The building is a very handsome one, situated in the central part of the city, and is, without doubt, the finest structure of the kind in the State. It was built entirely at the expense of Mr. Male.

The taking of the census has just been completed in this State, showing 100,000 more inhabitants than we had five years ago. In 1880 the population was 1,131,116. The increase is mainly in the counties nearest New York and Philadelphia, while the agricultural districts have only held their own.

ON THE ENGINE.

Running a Locomotive While Traveling—
Something the Passengers Did not Know—
A Physician Saves an Engineer.

Dr. David Kennedy, Romulus, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—I am an engineer on the old New Haven Railroad, half hour travel between Hartford and New Haven, residing in Stamford. Ten years ago I suffered every bad frost from dysentery. Once I had a severe attack, and was unable to get up. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would feel as though it were a man's fist. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as though it were a raw egg. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a raw egg. What agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

I layed aside my work, King to John, and by taking a bath daily the following day of June A. D. 1820, and recorded in book No. 2 of deeds for said county, on pages 436 and 437, and being the same premises described in book No. 3, of deeds for Essex county, on page 424 etc.

The fourth tract—Beginning at the road leading from Belleville to Bloomfield upper school house, at the southeast corner of a lot of land belonging to Henry King, lying on the north side of the road, and extending eastward along the line of the said Henry King to the Third river, thence along the Third river southward along the stream to the northwest corner of a lot of land belonging to John Aaron King, thence southward along the line of his land to the aforesaid road, thence westward along the said road to the place of beginning, containing ten acres, be the same more or less, and being the same premises described in a deed recorded in book O, of deeds for Essex county, on page 548 etc.
